Three Roses Gallery, Arundel hosts exclusive exhibition by renowned local artists Chris Aggs and Peter McNiven

Arundel's contemporary art venue, Three Roses Gallery, will be hosting an exclusive exhibition of paintings by local artists, Chris Aggs and Peter McNiven from 18 to 29 November 2007.

Much of Chris Aggs' inspiration stems from nature and local scenes. His ability to seize reality through the familiar, with a focus on form, tone and colour, has gained him several awards, including the David Murray Award for Landscape Painting.

Chris currently lectures at The University College, Chichester and has exhibited his work successfully both in solo and group shows. He has produced public commissions such as 'Sunrise over Weald' for Worthing Hospital and his work is contained in a number of private collections.

Peter McNiven is Director of Art at Cranleigh School in Surrey and continues to exhibit his work at various galleries within the UK and France, including the Queen's Collection Windsor. Peter has been selected for the Portrait Award Exhibition at the National Portrait Gallery on five occasions, winning a prize in 1991.

"My paintings celebrate the visual world," comments Peter McNiven, "sometimes a gradual stalking, more recently a more risky, sudden response. Certain combinations of colours, rhythms or forms are irresistible. I am constantly astonished and challenged by the strength yet subtlety light brings. Sunlight, specifically, changes everything and so quickly, yet its transience gives permanence to my work."
